Chromebook reminder:

Intentional damage to any device will be paid for out of your pocket. The school will not pay for intentional damage.

Intentional damage for example would be but not limited to:

Dropping the device onto the floor, desk, etc. instead of setting it down.

Shutting the cover of someone else's chromebook or pressing the keys on someone's device and causing damage because of it.

Purposely charging into someone or any type of horsing around causing the device to fall creating damage to the device.

Keep in mind you should never put your chrome book in your school bag along with your water bottle or anything else that could spill onto or into your device. If the water bottle spills, it could be considered intentional.

If you have any type of damage to your device, you need to bring it to the tech office, you will fill out a damage form, take that form home and have your parent/guardian sign it, bring it back and receive a loaner until your device is fixed. It will be at the discretion of the tech department, principal, and superintendent as to the damage being accidental or intentional. If your device is damaged a second time, whether intentional or not, there will be a parent meeting called before you will receive a device.
